

Award Criteria

Mark Dundon Research Award

The individual who receives The Mark Dundon Research Award must meet the following criteria:

- Demonstrated sustained leadership in the creation and dissemination of research to advance the principle science and practice of workplace health & well-being (HWB) or a comparable field.
- Held at a position in workplace HWB or at an organization that has met the criteria for a healthy workplace (as defined by one of the benchmarking tools recognized by HERO).
- Demonstrated impact in the field of workplace HWB through one or more of the following:
 - Published author in a peer reviewed article or study
 - Led or authored research that has helped to shape the field of prevention
 - Provided leadership in the facilitation of important research in the field

Specific Areas Used to Measure Each Candidate

- Outline the various research projects the candidate has been involved with over his or her career. Please include paid as well as volunteer positions, the dates of service (approximate if needed), a description of the organization/committee or subcommittee and the contributions provided by the candidate.
- Illustrate the relevance to workplace HWB and impact of the work conducted as a member of a research team or organization contributing to the advancement of workplace HWB. Were they involved in landmark research? Is the research often quoted? Place an extra weight on meaningful results.
- The overall body of work contributed during the candidate's career, to include (but not limited to) written and oral presentations delivered. For consideration by the Awards Committee, please provide the title of any books, book chapters, op-ed articles, paid or unpaid presentations and the dates published or presented and the publisher or the forum for the oral presentation.

- Other awards and/or recognition for achievement, excellence and research in the field of workplace HWB.
- NEW in 2021: To enable HERO to recognize diverse achievements in workplace HWB, please include research or activities that specifically focus on the community or address social determinants of health of employees.
