Greetings!

The Healthy Workplaces Healthy Communities Committee (HWHC) is a national employer-community collaboration initiative through the Health Enhancement Research Organization (HERO) that provides business and community leaders with practical tools and strategies for building support and investing in shared priorities. Since 2013, HERO has focused on building the business case for employer engagement in community-wide population health initiatives. With the help of a grant from the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, the Healthy Workplace Healthy Communities website (get-HWHC.org) was developed. This website was created to be a dynamic resource in defining the business case for employers to invest in community health improvement initiatives while introducing case studies, highlighting emerging best practices, and providing resources to assist in building multisector partnerships.

If you represent a business, corporation, healthcare system or coalition engaged in community health and well-being initiatives, we'd love to hear your story! HERO is currently accepting case study submissions to be considered for publication on the get-HWHC.org website. Please complete the attached form and submit to Emily.wolfe@hero-health.org. All submissions will be reviewed by HWHC Committee co-chairs, the HWHC Case Study Workgroup, and HERO Staff for consideration. Our goal is to continue to highlight real world examples of businesses and communities partnering together to build healthier communities across the country. We hope to hear from you!

With gratitude,

Emily Wolfe, MSW, LCSW
